- Presents the findings and recommendations of a research project
- Aimed for a non-specialized audience
- Distills lessons learned from the research
- A stand alone document
- Provides policy advice

Example (Elephants and Electric Fences. Sri Lanka EEPSEA 2005):

Elephants are one of the big five wildlife species; their survival is one of the holy grails of conservation. Unfortunately, because of their size and migratory behaviour, elephants often come in contact with people. This is especially true in densely populated southeast Asia. A new study from Sri Lanka looks at one strategy to address this problem – electric fences.
